Gendarmenmarkt, Berlin

Gendarmenmarkt Christmas Market (November 26 – December 31), held in the fabulous Mitte neighborhood, beautifully melds old and new craftsmanship in its month-long celebration of the holidays. Some of the most authentic Christmas shopping in the city can be found here, with dresses, woodcarvings and photographs on offer. We suggest watching the craftsmen at work and catching a performance on the main stage, which occur throughout the day.

Winter World at Potsdamer Platz (November 2 – January 6) is ideally located as a stop in between touring Berlin's highlights. In addition to shopping, activities include tobogganing down a manmade hill of snow and ice skating.

Brussels

Winter Wonders (November 30 – January 6) is the largest and most pedestrian-friendly of all the Christmas markets. Cordoned off to vehicles, the area feels tucked away from the city bustle and transports visitors to a brightly lit wonderland of sparkling neon Christmas lights, ferris wheels, merry-go-rounds and even a slalom. Winter Wonders spans multiple locations, so it is recommended to go with a guide who can direct you to the best vendors.

Budapest

Vorosmarty Square Christmas Fair and Festival (November 9 – January 1) is a top-notch local street food market. It's known for its trdelniks, a type of grilled cake, and langos a deep-fried, savory dough that can be served with butter, garlic, cheese or bacon. There are plenty of activities on offer, though the inaugural welcoming of Santa on December 6 is a festive highlight. Visitors can go for a skate, shop for glass-blown ornaments and hand-carved jewelry boxes, and watch performances from local folk musicians.

Basilica of Budapest Christmas Market (November 23 – January 1), with its plentiful stalls and skating rink, is best visited in the evenings, when a light show is projected onto the Basilica.

Tivoli Gardens Market (November 17 – December 31) is Copenhagen's most enchanting and family-friendly market. Complete with festive music, decorations and 60 food stalls filled with donuts and mulled wine, the garden hosts amusement park rides and a series of fantastical light and fireworks shows during the season.

The cozy Freetown Christiania Christmas Market (December 8 – 20) is held indoors at Christiania's Grey Hall and is ideal for travelers looking to venture off the beaten path. It has the feel of a flea market, with traditional Scandinavian delicacies, funky home goods and trinkets on offer.

Dublin

St. Stephen's Green Christmas Market (dates TBC) is famous for its beautiful holiday lights. Set on Grafton Street, the jovial center of Dublin, the market's Procession of Lights in mid-November is not to be missed. On weekends, visit for face painting with elves and the chance to mail a letter to Santa Clause.

London

While Sweden is known for its glogg, Munich is renowned for its glühwein— a type of mulled wine that is nowhere better consumed than at Marienplatz Market (November 27 – December 28). Pair a glass with a freshly baked pretzel and enjoy the festive backdrop of nativity scenes and advent music.

Paris

Marché de Noël Paris Notre-Dame (December 15 – 24) is held on René Viviani Square for fewer than 15 days each year. Hosting 40 local craftsmen, the market offers charming French objets d’art and Boules de Meisenthal (Christmas ornaments) along the Seine. Be warned, per usual, this area is extremely crowded.

At the Left Bank’s charming St-Germain des Prés Christmas Market (December 1 – January 1), vendors are focused on evergreen, locally sourced products (such as accessories) and high-quality provisions as opposed to sweets and holiday tchotchkes. The market is small, and perhaps a bit less festive than the others, but worthwhile. Another favorite festive activity is ogling Avenue Montaigne’s haute couture Christmas trees, decorated and auctioned off annually by designers.

While only a year old, the Village de Noël du Champs de Mars (dates TBC) offers a smorgasbord of international foods and crafts, with its highlight being a skating rink at the foot of the Eiffel Tower.

Wenceslas Square Market (December 1 – January 6), named after the fabled Good King, is made up of small, wooden huts serving Pilsners, mulled wine, spit-roasted hams and trdelniks, delicious fried pastries. Baked over a flaming hot grill, these rolls of dough are covered in cinnamon sugar and filled with Nutella—and are reason alone to visit the market.

Just five minutes from Wenceslas Square, Old Town Square Market (December 1 – January 6) has an extremely impressive Christmas tree that is illuminated daily at 4:30pm. Children will also appreciate the host of animal stables depicting the Nativity Scene, which functions as a petting zoo.

Rome

In a nod to Vatican City, Piazza Navona Christmas Market (December 8 – January 6) is centered around a nativity scene beside St. Peter's Basilica, and has gorgeous, hand-carved nativity figurines for sale. On January 5, look out for live performances of La Befana, a legendary Christmas witch who delivers gifts to children.

Salzburg

Located in the world's capital of The Sound of Music and Mozart, Cathedral Square Market (dates TBC) offers a superb collection of artisanal goods and handicrafts, especially ornaments. Favorites include engraved horseshoes, hand-painted cowbells and needlepoint pillows sewn with traditional German phrases.

Schloss Hellbrunn Market (November 22 – December 24) adds to the beauty of the Schloss Hellbrunn palace with its decorated fountains, grottos and the iconic gazebo from The Sound of Music. Petting zoos, pony rides and a Christmas-themed post office pop-up are pluses for families. There's even a portion of the castle devoted entirely to the eerie myth of Krampus.

Skansen Christmas Market is centered around a charming outdoor museum that pays homage to traditional agricultural practices and ways of life (weekends, dates TBC). Go for the holiday cheer and the delightful scent of traditional sausages, cheeses and sweet spices that fill the air.

Stortorget Market (weekends, November 24 – December 16) has been held in Stockholm's oft-photographed Gamla Stan (Old Town) since 1837 and is one of the world's most popular and recognizable venues for holiday shopping. Indulge in such Swedish Christmas dishes as halmbockar (goat) or råraka (hash browns) served with lingonberry jam and fried pork. Or, purchase a traditional advent candle holder; the handicrafts here are unique and wholly indigenous to the region.

Strasbourg

Christkindelsmärk

One of oldest in Europe, Christkindelsmärk (November 23 – December 30), made up of 11 smaller markets, is a charming ode to the traditions of French Christmas. We recommend attending a classical concert and going for a horse-drawn carriage ride around town before admiring the 100-ft. Christmas tree.

Vienna

Held outside the former imperial summer palace, Schonbrunn Palace Market (November 18 – December 26) is well-paired with a late afternoon tour of Gloriette and the Schonbrunn Apartments. As the sun sets, enjoy a tapas-style dinner of traditional delicacies from several of the food stalls.

City Hall's Rathausplatz Market (November 17 – December 26) is easily accessible from the city center, and offers an ice skating trail full of twists and turns. We suggest visiting in the evening, when the rink is at its most atmospheric.

Located in a historic district of the city, Spittelberg Market (November 16 – December 23) is intimate, with stalls lining narrow alleyways and side streets. Vendors sell some of the most artisanal, handsome handicrafts in the city.

Warsaw

Located in the heart of Old Town beside the Barbakan Fortress, Barbakan Christmas Market (November 24 – January 6) is popular with both locals and visitors for its hot beer, fresh pierogis and the best holiday shopping in the city. Highlights include handmade amber jewelry, hand-knit sweaters, leather slippers and traditional Polish ornaments. For those craving sweets, opt for a loaf of piernik gingerbread.

Zurich

Weihnachtsmarkt, Zurich

Wienachtsdorf (November 22 – December 23) is one of Zurich's largest Christmas markets and is located directly in front of the Opera House. Selling Swiss fondue and other traditional dishes, locally-sourced jewelry and ornaments, Wienachtsdorf's main attraction is its gorgeous ice rink. Here, visitors are invited to enjoy a casual skate or try their hand at curling.

Weihnachtsmarkt and the Singing Christmas Tree (November 23 – December 23) is both bizarre and enchanting. Standing on multi-tiered, elevated platforms, carolers from varying Swiss regions sing nightly beside a large Christmas tree structure.

At Christkindlimarkt (November 22 – December 24), Zurich's main train station, a 50-foot-tall Christmas tree rivals Rockefeller Center's. With one of the largest indoor markets in Zurich, Christkindlimarkt is a good shopping stop prior to a train ride to the Alps.
